A summary tells about the whole story, not just one part. Everything in the summary must be true and told in the sequence it occurred in the story.

Before you can write a summary, you have to know what the story is about. Use the 5 W's and How to help you. They are:

Who
What
When Where
Why
How

Let's try it.
Think of the Legend of Robin Hood and fill in the 5 W's and How.

Who: Robin Hood
What: robbed from the rich and gave to the poor
When: The Middle Ages
Where: Sherwood Forest, England
Why: to fight against the evilness of the Sheriff of Nottingham
by tricking him and stealing his gold

Summary

Read the information and trace the dotted words.

A summary retells the most important parts of a story.

The Sheriff of Nottingham was furious with Robin Hood. He had been tricked yet again. He devised a plan to trap Robin. He planned a daylong archery contest because he did not think Robin would be able to resist competing. The prize was a golden arrow. The day of the contest arrived and the sheriff was on the lookout for Robin Hood, but no one was dressed in Robin's famous Lincoln green! Where was Robin? Robin was not about to be fooled, so he had dressed as a beggar. When it was Robin's turn, he stepped forward, notched his arrow, and pulled back the string. With a hiss, the arrow flew straight to the center of the target. Robin had won the golden arrow right under the nose of the sheriff himself!

Think of the 5 W's and How to complete the summary for this story.

Who: Robin Hood
What: entered an archery competition
When: early in the morning
Where: Nottingham
Why: to win the golden arrow
How: his arrow hit the center of the target

Summary

Read the paragraph and trace the important clues.

Staying in the shadows, Marion watched closely as the uniformed guard talked loudly to the beggar. "Well, what news have you on the whereabouts of Robin Hood?" The dirty man spoke in a much quieter voice because he knew how much the people loved Robin, "I overheard some of his men at the tavern. They will be meeting at midnight in the church." The soldier dropped a few coins into the beggar's hand and ran off to tell the sheriff. Marion waited until the street was vacant and hurried off to warn Robin.

Robin needed to cross the river, but the recent storm had made it deep. He was dressed for a secret meeting with enemies of the sheriff and Prince John. He did not want to show up dripping wet. Luckily, Friar Tuck was at his station ready to carry travelers across the river. Once on the other side, Friar Tuck made Robin carry HIM back across the river. On the other side, a sword fight began. Since Friar Tuck was a mountain of a man and as strong as a bull, he won the battle. Robin grinned up at him from the ground and asked, "Come and join me. I could use a man like you."

Summary

Help Robin Hood escape the Sheriff and return safely to Sherwood Forest.

A summary tells about the WHOLE STORY, not just one part. Everything in the summary must be true and told in the sequence it occurred in the story.

Let's use the 5 W's and How from the previous pages to practice writing a summary. These facts have to be put into sentences.

Who: Marion
Where: Nottingham
Why: to warn him of danger
What: spying for Robin
When: night time
How: telling him what she heard

Marion spied for Robin Hood in the streets of Nottingham at night. When she found out his meeting place and time had been discovered, she warned him of the danger by telling him.

Who: Robin
Where: a river
Why: Friar Tuck made Robin carry him
What: a fight with Friar Tuck
When: before a meeting
How: with swords

Robin needed to cross a river to get to a meeting. He ended up in a swordfight with Friar Tuck because after first carrying Robin across the river, he made Robin carry him back.

When you are asked to answer a summary question:

1. Think of the 5 W's and How. Write your own summary based on those questions next to the paragraph.
2. Look at your answer choices and ask yourself: Which one tells about the WHOLE STORY, not just one or two parts.
3. Check to make sure EVERYTHING in the answer choice is true and sequenced correctly.

Robin Hood lived in Sherwood Forest fighting against the injustices of Prince John and his ally, the Sheriff of Nottingham. However, he did not have to fight alone. Robin had a group of men who lived in the forest with him and he called them his Merry Men. Almost all of them joined the group after Robin had picked a fight with them. Robin almost always lost and then asked the winner to become part of his group. Robin was cunning and wise because he surrounded himself with strong men who had many talents. No wonder the sheriff always lost!

- Robin fights injustices from the safety of Sherwood Forest
- Robin picks fights with other men and asked them to join his group, the Merry Men.
- Robin Hood lives in Sherwood Forest. He battles against injustices and has recruited the Merry Men to help him. With Robin leading the group of talented men, the Sheriff is sure to lose.
- Prince John battles against Robin Hood and his Merry Men. From Sherwood Forest, Robin and the Sheriff plan clever ways to steal the Prince's gold.

Summary

Read the information and follow the steps.

One of Robin's Merry Men is Alan a Dale. Robin came across him in Sherwood Forest one day, and for once didn't start a fight! The next day he saw him again, but this time Alan was unhappy. Alan's true love was given to an evil knight to be his bride. Alan promised that he would always serve Robin if he would help him rescue her. Robin snuck into the wedding ceremony dressed as a musician carrying a horn. At just the right moment, he blew his horn and the Merry Men burst into the room along with Alan. Friar Tuck then married Alan and his true love, Ellen.

- Robin met Alan a Dale in Sherwood Forest and Alan became one of the Merry Men.
- Ellen was given in marriage to an evil knight breaking Alan's heart. Later Friar Tuck married Alan and Ellen.
- Robin met Alan in the forest and they planned to rescue Ellen. Robin dressed as a soldier and freed her.
- Robin met Alan in Sherwood Forest and when he heard about his troubles agreed to help him. In return, Alan promised his service to Robin. Robin pretended to be a musician and was able to signal the Merry Men so they could free Ellen. Ellen and Alan then got married.

Summary

Use your strategies to choose the BEST SUMMARY for the paragraph above.

Robin Hood met one of his Merry Men, Little John, in his normal way, fighting! It seems that Robin was trying to cross a wide river that had a narrow bridge. On the other side, walking towards him, was a man over seven feet tall. When they got to the middle, neither would go back. So, in true Robin Hood style, a challenge was given. Since John had a staff, Robin cut one for himself, and the fight began. In the end, it was Robin Hood who landed in the water. The Merry Men suddenly appeared and wanted to get even with Little John for knocking Robin into the water. Robin wouldn't hear of it and offered Little John to join the Merry Men. Of course, John accepted and a great friendship began.

- Little John joined the Merry Men after fighting Robin Hood on a bridge.
- Robin got into a fight while trying to cross a bridge. He lost after he was knocked into the water. The winner, Little John, joined the Merry Men and a friendship was born.
- Robin meets a seven-foot tall man on a bridge. Later, the stranger, known as Little John, joins the Merry Men.
- Little John won the fight by knocking him into the water. Little John joins the Merry Men.

The MAIN IDEA tells what the story is mostly or mainly about. It will always be stated in a sentence. The other sentences are details.

There are different ways to find the main idea:

We will explore each one.

1. Read the WHOLE story or paragraph. Use the formula

Problem + Solution = Main Idea

2. Look at the TITLE. The title always states the main idea in a simple way.

3. Before reading the story, read the first, second, and last paragraph. If you are asked for the main idea of a paragraph, read the paragraph and then reread and underline the first, second, and last sentence of the paragraph.

Problem + Solution = Main Idea

A fictional story always has a problem for the character to solve. Read the paragraph below and trace important clues about the problem and solution facing the huntsman in the story of Snow White by the Brothers Grimm.

The huntsman took the young girl deep into the woods. He was under orders by the Queen to kill her, because the Queen was jealous of her beauty. He was in turmoil. He wanted to be loyal to the Royal family, but what he was being asked to do was not right. When he was ready to strike, she begged him to let her run deep into the forest with a promise never to return home. His heart lifted. This he could do.

Problem: The huntsman had been ordered to kill Snow White.

Solution: He let Snow White run deep into the forest with the promise never to return.

Main Idea: The huntsman defied the Queen's order by letting Snow White hide in the forest rather than kill her.

The stars were sparkling bright and scattered across the sky as though they were diamonds laying on black velvet. On any other night, it would be beautiful. Tonight, however, Shannon was lost. She heard sounds all around her. Snapping twigs, the hoot of a distant owl, and the rustling of leaves sounded like thunder in her ears. She knew she couldn't be far from her campsite and the safety of the fire. Shannon calmed herself, sat down at the base of a wide oak tree, and forced herself to think. She got used to the sounds and strained her ears for something familiar, something safe. Finally, in the distance, she heard laughter. That was it! Lifting her flashlight, she shone it on the path in front of her following the sounds.
She stepped from behind a tree and the campfire was straight ahead of her. Her family stopped laughing, turned, and smiled at her.

Unscramble the words to find the animals in the forest. Circle them.

The title always states the main idea in a simple way.

Crazy for Raccoons

I love raccoons. Raccoons are nocturnal, which means they are most active at night. They are very intelligent, kind of like the Einstein of animals. They can get into anything, especially your trash. They do not have any saliva in their mouths, so they appear to be washing their food. What they are really doing is getting the food wet in order to swallow it. The raccoon's face has what looks like a black mask across its eyes. They have black hands, and a large bushy tail with black and yellowish white rings on it. Raccoons are amazing to watch in action.

This paragraph gives facts and details about raccoons. The author also states her opinion about the things raccoons do. Without ever having read a word of the paragraph, the reader already knows it will be about raccoons because of the title.

Skunks Stink Surprising Skunks

Skunk. You just have to say the word and your nose twists up on your face, your stomach does a flip-flop, and you utter a sound like, ugh! But, as stinky as they can be, they are a great help to humans. Did you know that they help control the rodent population? Well, they do. They catch and eat things like mice and rats that carry harmful diseases and can get into your homes. They also eat insects, that's right, insects! They are predators, but they can also be prey. Great Horned Owls would love nothing more than to make an evening meal out of one those odor-producing animals. Yes, they can get into your garbage, and dig up your lawn looking for those insects, but they're not THAT bad, are they?

Skunks Stink could NOT be the title for this story. Although skunks do stink, the paragraph does not talk much about that. It gives facts and details about what the skunk eats and how they act. Go back to the top and circle Surprising Skunks because that title reflects what the author actually wrote about.

Wolves are disappearing from the face of the earth. They were once one of the most widespread animals found outside the tropics. However, many people are afraid of wolves, so they have hunted and killed them to near extinction. People have also invaded their habitat to build roads and houses. The gray wolf is found only in Minnesota and in wildlife managed places like Yellowstone. In Texas, the red wolf has been placed on the endangered species list. Timber wolves, which used to roam the forests of the eastern United States, are completely gone. Unless people take notice of what is happening, we will lose the beautiful animals forever.

Disappearing Wolves Howling in the Night

The leaders of a wolf pack are called the alpha male and alpha female. They howl to communicate with each other. Wolves often hunt in packs. They surround the animal being hunted and corner it. The alpha wolf will howl to give directions to the pack. They will howl their response in return. Sometimes, though, they just seem to howl because they love it. Either way, howling projects the feeling and needs of the wolves at that moment.

Winter Wolves Howling to Live

Ever wonder who the best parents in the world are? Well, wolves would be at the top of the list. They nurture and care for their cubs, giving them lots of love. They keep their cubs well fed, clean, and are ever-present guardians over their young. The mother rarely leaves her cubs until weeks after they are born. She doesn't have to because the other members of the wolf pack bring food back to the den for both her and the cubs. When they are older, the youngsters start exploring the world around them. Other members of the pack help the mother watch over and teach them. Young wolves learn quickly to respect the older members of the pack. Being born into this family wouldn't be so bad.

Many national forests protect their owls' habitats. While most birds build their own nests, owls don't. They look for abandoned nests, live in tree cavities, or snags of branches. Snags are where branches of trees have grown together to provide shelter for the owls. Before cutting down trees, the rangers first look for these existing nests. It takes extra work and more time, but the park rangers believe in protecting the animals that live in their forest.

Main ideas are most often found in the first sentence (topic sentence) and the last sentence (conclusion).

The main idea is who and what the paragraph is about. It is one sentence long.

Main Idea : National forests protect the habitat of the owls that nest there.

Supporting details are : Owls don't build their own nests. Before cutting down trees, rangers look for existing nests, openings in tree trunks, and snags.

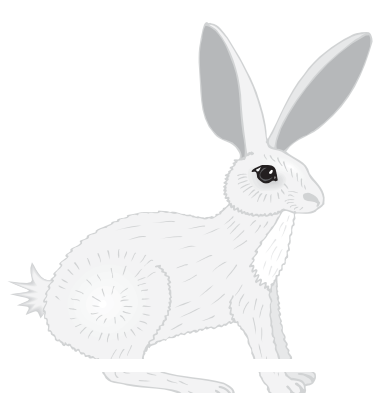
Although rabbits are found in every habitat from the arctic to the desert, they have many common characteristics. They have long ears and strong back legs for jumping. Thier eyes are on the sides of their heads, so they can see almost 360 degrees around them.They are vegetarians. They thump their back legs when they are in danger or afraid. This serves as a warning to other rabbits. They will hide in the underbrush to avoid a predator. In the wild, they only live about two years because they are easy prey. We do not have to worry about them becoming extinct because they can have up to seven litters a year. Each litter will have between two and twelve babies. No matter where a rabbit lives, what color or size it is, it acts and behaves just like the rabbit many people have as pets.

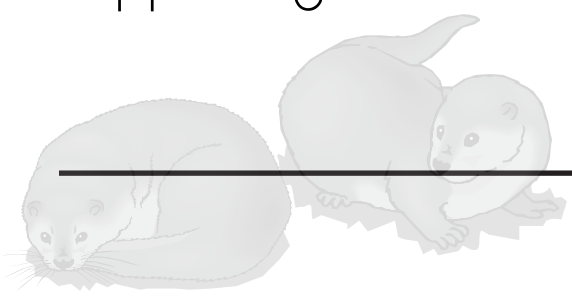
The main idea of this paragraph is: Rabbits are found all over the world, but they all have similar characteristics.



Main Idea

Trace the main idea in the paragraph below.

I love watching chipmunks! They are so much fun. We went camping at the national park last summer and we saw them running all over the place looking for food. They are so cute with brown fur and black and white stripes running straight down their backs. They make little chirping noises that sound almost like birds. I have lots of pictures of a brave chipmunk that kept trying to steal our food. I named him Chipper. I wanted to take him home as a pet, but my parents said no. They promised we could go back next year and I can't wait to see Chipper again.



Just like bears, chipmunks hibernate. Starting in late July, they begin to gather seeds for the upcoming winter. The gathering process is completed by October. When the weather turns cold, usually the beginning of November, the chipmunk heads to its burrow. Scientists are not sure exactly how long they hibernate. Some say they hibernate between one and eight days, get up, eat some of their food, and then go back into hibernation. Others say that the chipmunk does not enter hibernation until all of its food supply is depleted. Either way, it is a fact that the chipmunks hibernate like bears. Their heart rate decreases, breathing slows, and their body temperature lowers.
