The American Revolution had many famous history makers: Patrick Henry, a colonial leader, Phillis Wheatley, a freed slave who was a poet, and Paul Revere, a hero who warned that the British were approaching. Other important heroes were Thomas Paine, who wrote a pamphlet called "Common Sense", and Nathaniel Hale, who said, "I only regret that I have one life to lose for my country", before he was hanged. All of these were remarkable history makers.

The history makers we are studying are:

George Washington — Father of Our Country

Benjamin Franklin — Publisher and Patriot

Betsy Ross — Seamstress for the Colonies

Thomas Jefferson — Supporter of Individual Freedom

Molly Pitcher — A Heroic Woman

Samuel Adams — Planner of the Boston Tea Party

George Washington
Father of our Country (1732-1799)

George Washington began his adult life as a surveyor and a farmer, but he joined the Virginia militia in the 1750's to fight the French, who wanted control of the Colonies. Soon his views about Britain changed, and in the 1760's he joined the acts of resistance against the British. Washington was chosen to lead the Continental Army in July 1775. The American Revolution lasted six years. Washington had a difficult job as commander. One of the most difficult times was a command at Valley Forge, Pennsylvania, during the harsh winter of 1777 to 1778. His army did not have enough food, shoes, or warm clothing. But because of Washington's leadership, the troops stayed together. In 1781, the British surrendered at Yorktown. After the war, he was elected the first President of the United States of America. He served two terms as President. George Washington is known as the Father of Our Country.

Benjamin Franklin
Publisher and Patriot (1706-1790)

Benjamin Franklin was an author, scientist, philosopher, inventor, and publisher. "Poor Richard's Almanac" was one of his most famous publications. Benjamin Franklin helped the Colonies in many ways to gain independence from Britain. Franklin helped convince the British Parliament to withdraw the Stamp Act. He served as a member of the Second Continental Congress. Franklin helped write the Declaration of Independence, the Articles of Confederation, and the first Constitution of the United States. Benjamin Franklin was sent to Great Britain to help work out a peace agreement. Franklin was one of the signers of the Paris Peace Treaty. Not only did Franklin contribute to the American Revolution, but he was also member of the Constitutional Convention of 1787. Benjamin Franklin was a great American patriot.

Betsy Ross
Seamstress of the Colonies (1752-1836)

Elizabeth Griscom, better known as Betsy Ross, is credited with making the first American flag. She attended Quaker schools and learned needlework there and at home. She married John Ross and they started an upholstery business. In this business, Betsy used her skills as a seamstress. After a visit from George Washington in June 1776, Betsy Ross made the first American flag. It was known as "The Stars and Stripes". It featured 13 five-pointed stars on a background of blue, 7 red stripes, and 6 white stripes. After her husband died she was a widow, a mother, and managed her household and business alone. Although some think her story is a legend, she is a symbol for what many women of the time experienced.

Thomas Jefferson
Supporter of Individual Freedom (1743-1826)

Thomas Jefferson was a lawyer and inventor. He was also a student of mathematics, architecture, and science. He is most remembered for being the main author of the Declaration of Independence. Jefferson was known during the American Revolution to be a strong supporter of American independence from Britain. "A Summary View of the Rights of British Americans" was a pamphlet he wrote in 1774 to express his views. He also served as a delegate to the Continental Congress. Jefferson wrote most of the Declaration of Independence, signed on July 4, 1776, stating the Colonies' independence from Britain. Jefferson went on to become our third President and served two terms. After retiring, he founded the University of Virginia in 1825. Jefferson was known to represent the American beliefs of equality and democracy.

Molly Pitcher
A Heroic Woman (1753-1832)

Mary Hays McCauly is better known as Molly Pitcher. She earned the name by accompanying her husband at the Battle of Monmouth on June 18, 1778. It was extremely hot during this battle, and Molly brought pitchers of water to cool the hot guns and to give water to thirsty troops. She also nursed the wounded soldiers. When her husband was wounded in battle, she stepped forward and took his place loading and firing cannons. George Washington recognized Molly's efforts and made her a non-commissioned officer. She was then known as "Sergeant Molly". Whether you call her Mary or Molly, she is an example of the bravery by women in the Revolutionary War.

Samuel Adams
Planner of the Boston Tea Party (1722-1803)

Samuel Adams was a politician and a writer. He believed in changes using as little violence as possible. He helped in stirring the American Colonists to overthrow British rule. Even as far back as the Sugar Act (1764), Adams organized protests against the British rule. He believed that no one should have to pay taxes that had not been made by their own representatives. He formed committees and held meetings to try to find peaceful solutions to the Colonists' problems. He helped plan the Boston Tea Party, where tea was dumped into Boston Harbor to protest the tax on tea by the British. Samuel Adams was the first to suggest that the colonists should be completely independent of the British. Samuel Adams was a man of action without violence.
